Dr. Showanasai, a retired university lecturer with a lifelong passion for learning. After dedicating 35 years to teaching in business school at Prince of Songkla University in Thailand. Long time ago, his Fulbright scholarship brought him to Vanderbilt University and, fortunately, led him to the domain of educational leadership as he earned his Ed.D. From the Education University of Hong Kong. He firmly believes that the future of education is intrinsically linked to how educators leverage technology and their own creativity to enhance the learning process. In light of the rapid advancements in technology, he emphasizes the necessity for educators to remain lifelong learners.
