

Professor Chou Kee-lee on HK's competitiveness

- TVB ran an interview with Professor Chou Kee-lee, Chair Professor of Social Policy, on HK's competitiveness.
- As CE John Lee lately said that it is necessary for the HK population to increase to ten million to maintain the city's competitiveness, Professor Chou commented that ancillary services such as housing, education and medical care would be needed for HK to attract talent and help them settle down in the city without creating conflicts between immigrants and local residents. He pointed out that if the working population has not increased with the growing population, the PPI, labour force and production force would drop.
